

Sportsfield Concessions !

Published on February 9, 2011

Dave Lazzarino

Prince Albert Daily Herald

Alfred Jenkins Field House

As user numbers continue to rise at the Alfred Jenkins Field House, ways to feed their growing appetites are now available.

The new concession booth is now open and, in the spirit of healthy living that the building is used to promote, the menu has taken a departure from the standard greasy spread that snack bars are notorious for carrying. Of course, they do serve some standards like pizza, nachos and hot dogs, but all cooked food is made in a microwave convection oven, taking away a need for a deep fryer and grill which is where most of the unhealthy options find their beginnings.

Added to that, items like salads, wraps and smoothies have upped the content of fruits and vegetables for the athletes in the facilities - or parents in the stands.

As the concession is owned and operated by the city, profits will be collected along with other concessions around the city and used for operational costs of city recreational facilities.

the End . . . .